Trudeau asks ministers to engage media

Working well with others — including people in the media — is now officially part of the job description for Canadian cabinet ministers.

The “mandate letters” given to every minister are setting a new bar for co-operation in Justin Trudeau’s government, according to one letter obtained in advance of the expected public release.

In fact, if the sheer word volume in these letters is any indication, co-operation seems to be the top item on the to-do list of Trudeau’s team.

Ministers are being warned that they will be judged by how well they treat a whole raft of people — everyone from business to labour, stakeholders and citizens, and yes, the opposition and the media too.

“Members of the Parliamentary Press Gallery, indeed all journalists in Canada and abroad, are professionals who, by asking necessary questions, contribute in an important way to the democratic process. Your professionalism and engagement with them is essential,” the letter states.

This is a slightly more formal way of saying what Trudeau told a crowd booing reporters during the election campaign. “Hey! We have respect for journalists in this country,” Trudeau chided. “They ask tough questions and they’re supposed to. OK?” TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

OC TRANSPO

First, last trips face axe

Emma Jackson
Metro | Ottawa

Some 237 customers across 63 bus routes may have to find a new way to work if a plan to cut first and last trips is approved.

OC Transpo tabled its 2016 budget at transit commission Thursday, and with an $11.5-million deficit, managers got creative to find savings, said general manager John Manconi.

The selected routes all have 10 or fewer riders on their first or last trip, and several have none at all. The cuts would save about $500,000. To reduce customer impacts, citizen commissioner Blair Crew suggested a compromise time between the first and details of how that increase will be applied.

The increase is an average, Manconi confirmed, and could be higher or lower for different types of fares. But those details won't be available until early 2016, because OC Transpo is doing a comprehensive fare review.

The commission will debate the budget Dec. 3 before council votes Dec. 9.

Ottawa city council tables draft operating budget

Fifty full-time jobs to be cut as city looks to trim $17.4M

 Lucy Scholey
Metro | Ottawa

Ottawa taxpayers will see a predictable two per cent increase in property bills next year — but the city is left to cut jobs and find $17.4 million in savings.

Council tabled the 2016 draft operating budget on Thursday. The tax-supported portion of the city budget (which does not include water and sewer rates) has increased by $80.5 million over last year to $2.834 million.

If you're an average urban homeowner — with a property assessed at $375,300 — your property taxes will increase by $72. That includes police, transit and city-wide services.

Water and sewer rates are expected to increase by another six per cent — or $49 more for that average urban homeowner.

In his opening address, Ottawa Mayor Jim Watson called the draft budget "good news for local families, residents and businesses ... all of whom expect us to live within our means."

However, it comes at a cost. The city is saddled with finding $17.4 million in "operational efficiencies" and cutting 50 full-time equivalent positions.

The cost-cutting plan includes:

- Reducing travel and conference costs
- Cutting advertising dollars
- Reducing the use of third-party consultants
- Converting streetlights to more efficient LED bulbs

- Reducing overtime
- Selling surplus land

Despite all these trimmings, Watson stressed that Ottawa residents will not see any impacts on frontline services.

"We will become ... more efficient and more lean on the administrative side of the organization," he said.

To help offset next year's shortfalls, the city will need to dip into the $23 million fleet and equipment reserve for one-time bridge funding. The city is expecting more tax revenues from new development ($18.4 million) and user fees ($7.2 million, for a $3 million increase).

The line-by-line details have yet to be hashed out — stay tuned for the upcoming committee meetings — before council votes on the final product Dec. 9.

BY THE NUMBERS

Here is a rundown of some key draft budget items:

- $326 million for infrastructure.
- $920,000 to wards for traffic calming actions.
- $2 million for upgrades to recreation facilities.
- $280,000 for the Blackburn Arena expansion.
- Continued $50,000 increase to low-income families who want to enroll in rec programs.
- More than $1.2 million to partner with other funders for Canada150 projects.
- $200,000 for the 40-kilometre winter cycling network.
- $1.1 million for Cyrville Road cycling improvements.
- $4.8 million down payment on the Fifth and Clegg Pedestrian Crossing linking Glebe to Old Ottawa East.
- $31 million investment in cycling over the next four years, up from $25 million.
- $63 million in winter maintenance (up from $4 million).
- 1.5 per cent increase in funding to health resource centres.

Where food, drink meet politics

Ever wondered where politicians and parliamentary staff hang out after a long day of important decision-making and problem solving? Some of Ottawa's many pubs and restaurants are frequented by the likes of federal party leaders and their caucuses — and you may be surprised at how much information is shared over a glass of Chardonnay.

1 He knows just how you like your martini — Xavier McNeill mixes a martini behind the bar at Zoe's Lounge inside the Fairmont Chateau Laurier.

2 An elegant pour for those on the floor — Bartender Elizabeth Gould pours a glass of Sancerre Daniel Chotard inside Luxe Bistro in the ByWard Market.

3 Getting to the pint — From left: Ian McKierahan, Paul Sanderson and Rob MacDonald wind down with some pints at Sir John A Pub on Elgin Street.

POLITICAL BUZZ
Jessica Murphy

One of the first signs of a power change in political Ottawa is the sight of the Liberals creeping back into D'Arcy McGee's.

The venerable Sparks Street bar had been home to a political tussle when Stephen Harper's Conservatives came to power in 2006 and, early on, ousted the Liberals from the favourite watering hole, says photographer Mitch Raphael, who has covered the Ottawa social scene for years.

But nine years later, with Justin Trudeau's Liberals back in power, D'Arcy McGee's is looking more and more like a resurgent Grit hangout in the post-federal election power shift.

Ottawa's 5-to-7 after-work hours are an "incredible time for information sharing," say Greg MacEachern, vice-president of government relations at EnviroNex.

"Despite all our mobile devices, a lot of information in Ottawa is transmitted over a glass of wine and an hors d'oeuvre," he said.

Photographer Raphael says there's a definite drinking culture on the Hill.

"There's a reason they all have (drivers)," he said.

There are a few factors that go into making a spot a regular hangout for political power players and their hangers on — chief among them proximity to Parliament Hill.

"The top spots are — you can almost draw a straight line — Metropolitain, D'Arcy's, Hy's and Brixton's," MacEachern said.

With the historic Hy's Steakhouse closing shop next year, the up-and-coming Bier Markt is still central in the city's political topography.

There are other issues that influence where politicos hang out. Beyond location, service counts. Having a favourite drink appear magically on the bar at a given establishment is an experience that has won over the hearts and the wallets of many a political staffer.

Then there's partisanship — a Liberal pub, an NDP bar, a Tory brasserie — with political tribes staking claims to specific spots even though the businesses themselves welcome all customers.

Summa Strategies consultant Angela Christiano also expects an uptick in official receptions in early 2016 as stakeholder groups try to get their issues on the Liberal government's radar and build relationships with new MPs and their staff in a social setting.

What's on the menu?

Here are some of the top beverage picks at popular political hangouts near Parliament Hill:

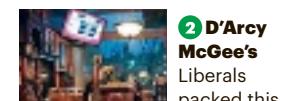

1 Bier Markt

The Sparks Street location opened a year ago and will likely take the place of Hy's Steakhouse come February.

Top Drinks:

- Crush Midnight Cabernet ($7.00); 'I Surrender' cocktail ($8.50).

2 D'Arcy McGee's

Liberals packed this spot to the rafters on Nov. 4 to celebrate the swearing-in ceremony.

Top Drinks:

- Mill Street Organic Lager, bottle ($5.65); 12-year Glenfiddich ($6.99).

3 Brixton's Pub

This long-time New Democrat hangout used to be packed on Wednesday nights after caucus.

Top Drinks:

- Beau's Lug Tread Organic, draught ($7.30); Yellow Label Wolf Blass Cabernet Sauvignon ($7.96).

4 Chateau Laurier & Zoe's

The venerable hotel is a regular spot for official receptions and its quiet cocktail lounge is an occasional Liberal haunt.

Top Drinks:

- Mill Street Tank House Ale, draught ($11.00); Trius Cabernet Sauvignon ($12.00).

5 Sir John A. Pub

It's off the beaten track, but this Elgin Street eatery is a go-to spot for Conservative staffers.

Top Drinks:

- Sandbanks Estate Baco Noir ($9.00); Mill Street Organic Lager, draught ($6.64).

The top spots are ... Metropolitain, D'Arcy's, Hy's and Brixton's.

LAWSUIT

Tentative settlement reached over developmental facilities

A tentative agreement has been reached in a class-action lawsuit involving 12 former residential facilities for people with developmental disabilities in Ontario.

The suit pitted former residents of the facilities against the province.

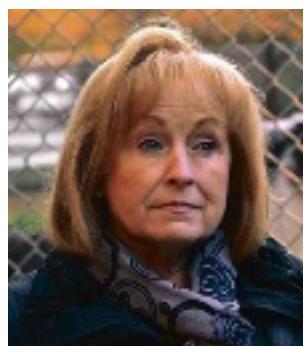

Ontario's Ministry of the Attorney General announced the tentative deal on Thursday, saying that if it was approved by a court, a settlement of nearly $36 million would be used to provide compensation to former residents who "suffered harm" while living at the facilities.

The 12 facilities closed between 1977 and 1999.

The settlement agreement would establish a process for eligible former residents of the facilities to make claims for compensation.

If approved by a court, the compensation claims would then be assessed by an independent claims administrator and be overseen by a former judge.

"This tentative agreement is a step to address a painful chapter of our province's history," said Madeleine Meilleur, Ontario's attorney general. "It is my hope that a settlement in this matter will help former residents who suffered harm move forward with dignity."

Two similar class actions were also settled by the province two years ago.

A $35-million settlement in case of residents at the Huronia Regional Centre in Orillia was reached in September 2013 and approved by a court in December of that year.

A $32.7-million settlement involving former residents of the Rideau Regional Centre in Smiths Falls and the Southwestern Regional Centre near Chatham was reached in December 2013 and approved in February 2014.

The Huronia settlement led Premier Kathleen Wynne to apologize in the Ontario legislature for the suffering residents experienced there.

Location of communism monument has been disputed

 Michael Woods
Metro | Ottawa

A decision on the fate of the controversial memorial to the victims of communism is coming "shortly," Heritage Minister Melanie Joly said Thursday.

The new minister said she still needs more information before deciding what to do about the much-criticized monument southwest of the Supreme Court building.

"I've been in the job for seven days, and in that context I want to make sure that I have all the information and that I have all the people that I need to take the right decision," she said at a news conference with Mayor Jim Watson.

She said she wants to give all the people who would be impacted by her decision a chance to speak, "in order to take a decision that is a sound one."

That would presumably include Tribute to Liberty, the group sponsoring the proposed monument.

"But there will be a decision taken, and there will be a decision taken promptly."

Joly, the minister responsible for the National Capital Commission, met with Watson on Thursday for the first time.

The mayor said he outlined the city's opposition to the memorial's planned location southwest of the Supreme Court building.

"The site that was chosen by the previous government is not appropriate and is out of scale," he said.

He said Joly is "wise to consult," given that a lack of consultation was a complaint about how the proposed memorial's location was chosen in the first place.

But he added: "If it could be done in the next two to three months, that would be wonderful."

Watson said the two also discussed the mayors' proposals to have seats on the NCC's board of directors, and the upcoming 2017 sesquicentennial celebrations in the capital.

Joly, who represents the Montreal riding of Ahuntsic-Cartierville, also met with Ottawa Centre MP Catherine McKenna, the federal environment minister, Thursday morning.

McKenna campaigned on moving the memorial from its location, and has also called for reforming the NCC to make it more transparent and generate more consultation on major projects.

immediately if they don't stick to a one-square-metre area that doesn't block sidewalks or drivers' sightlines.

The six-month window is a compromise from original recommendations to act after 90 days. Until Thursday the city didn't allow memorials at all, but staff left them alone unless they posed a hazard.

THINGS TO DO IN OTTAWA THIS WEEKEND

Holiday shopping, holiday homes, pets and tattoos — something for everyone this weekend in the capital HALEY RITCHIE/METRO

1 Ottawa Pet Expo (all weekend)

If you love all creatures great and small head to the EY Centre this weekend. Bring your own pets or just come out to meet Ottawa's cutest dogs, cats, birds and other pets. Vendors will be selling pet outfits, food, treats, toys and grooming and breeders and rescue operations will be on site. Admission is $15 and the show starts 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

2 613 Flea (Saturday)

The semi-annual creative showcase at Lansdowne's Aberdeen Pavilion is back and the perfect place to start holiday shopping. There will be 70 local vendors selling everything from vintage clothing to baked goods. Entry is free.

3 Home for the Holidays

Get into the holiday season by getting a peak into some of Ottawa's "exceptional" homes — all dressed up for the holidays by Ottawa florists and designers. All weekend long, homes from Rockcliffe to Kanata will be opened up to the public. Tickets are $50 a person and proceeds go to Hospice Care Ottawa.

4 Tattoo Expo (all weekend)

The Ottawa-Gatineau Tattoo Expo is taking place Nov. 13 to 15. The tattoo artist line-up features talent from across the country. Plenty of tattoo artists will be giving demos and showing their work, while other vendors include tattoo suppliers, photographers and jewellery. Entertainment includes burlesque, tattooed performers, live music and tattoo contests in multiple categories. Three tiers of entry start at $20 and go to $90, available for purchase on their website.

5 260 Fingers (all weekend)

It's the holiday season and there are a lot of craft shows going on in the capital. If you love pottery then your first stop should be the 260 Fingers show at the Glebe Community Centre. Work varies from large-scale decorative ceramics to kitchenware. The show opens at 6 p.m. Friday and continues Saturday and Sunday during the day. Admission is free.

Group known for putting on killer EDM shows

 Trevor Greenway
Metro | Ottawa

It didn't take long for production company DNA Presents to recognize there was a blood-craving thirst for massive EDM shows in Ottawa.

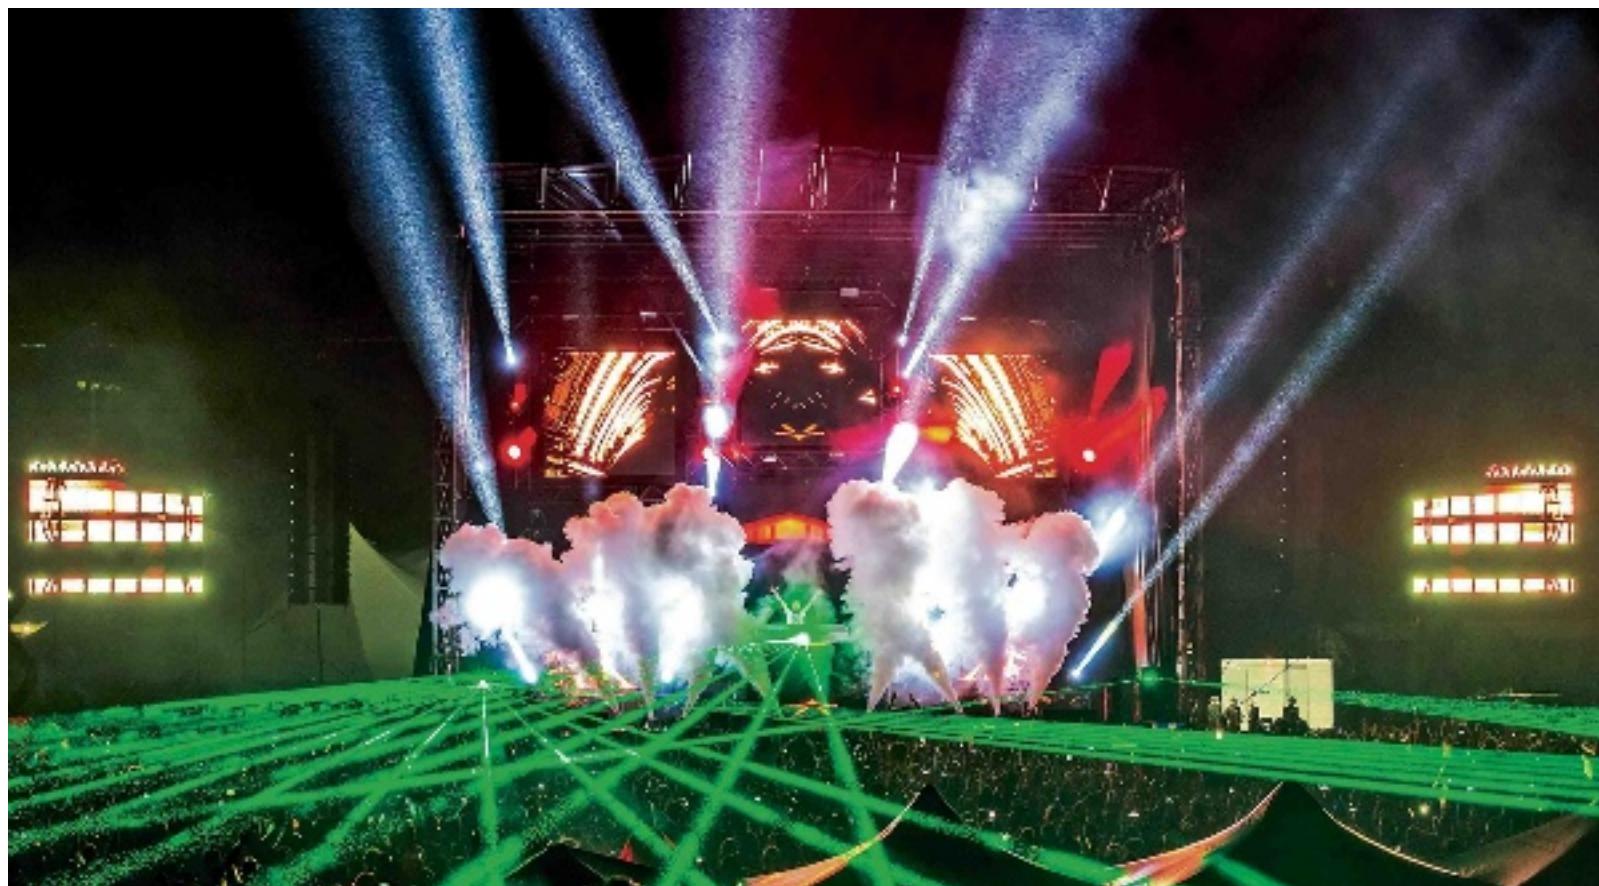

The proof was in the crowd that showed up at the EY Centre for their first major event in 2011 — close to 5,000 of them screaming for more beats from Toronto-born superstar DJ and producer Deadmau5.

"We are super excited about how the scene has transpired," says DNA director of marketing Maninder Virk.

But it wasn't always this way.

The scene that exists today was one that had to be carved out of sleepy Ottawa, scribe by scribe, chisel by chisel, until the loyal fan base swelled to the size it is now. It was an exceptional challenge for the crew at DNA to even convince big name DJs and promoters to come to Canada's capital, but, ultimately, it was the fans, the college 20-somethings whose lives constantly beat at 126 BPMs that made them believe.

"Ottawa is not a major market, so you really have to rely on a solid fan base for some of these shows to be successful," adds Virk.

A laser light show dazzles fans at last year's Escapade Music Festival. DNA Presents celebrates its fourth anniversary this Friday at Barrymore's. CONTRIBUTED

"So, I think what we have shown a lot of agents and artists in the world is that we do have a passionate fan base in the community and that when you do come to this city, you're going to have a good experience."

It's no surprise that Ottawans have come out in the thousands to DNA shows. All you need to do is quickly glance at the list of world-class selectors the company has brought here and you'll get it. Since DNA was created in 2011, some of the world's biggest DJs have dropped the bass on Ottawa EDM heads — pioneers of the craft Tiesto, Mark Knight and Steve Angello and newcomers taking the world by storm like Avicii, Dada Life, Calvin Harris and Canada's own Zeds Dead. The list literally goes on for pages.

But DNA has had its fare share of hurdles. It wasn't long ago when then partner Nick Vachon disappeared with more than $600,000 in profit from the 2012 Escapade Music Festival. He was later arrested in Aruba.

And putting on electronic music shows comes with its own stigma. Large DJ events are usually associated with club drugs like MDMA and other drugs and it's been a challenge to break down that stigma to have everyone focus on the music. But it's not about putting your head in the sand, says Virk.

"Trying to hide the stigma is not going to solve anything," says Virk, adding that DNA recently worked with Ottawa Public Health to put out information about bad drugs going around on Halloween this year.

"Instead of tossing everything under the rug, we identify it and make sure people are educated."

DNA is celebrating its fourth birthday with flare tonight at Barrymore's, and Dutch DJ duo Vicetone are taking care of the tunes.

It's a monster bash for DNA to celebrate all things electronic, the humps they've hopped over, the highs they've reached and the skies they will reach for.

Enjoy the birthday bass, DNA.

Christy Natsis gets five years in fatal impaired-driving case

An Ottawa judge has sentenced a Pembroke dentist to five years in prison in the impaired-driving death of Bryan Casey after a lengthy trial.

Casey — a father of three kids now aged 12, 14, and 16 — was killed on March 31, 2011 when he was heading eastbound on Highway 17 when an oncoming Ford Explorer collided with his car.

Dr. Christy Natsis was arrested and charged with impaired driving causing death and dangerous driving causing death.

The trial lasted nearly three years, and ended with Natsis in tears after Ontario Court Justice Neil Kozloff gave his judgement to the packed courtroom.

"The consequences of Natsis' behaviour were 'catastrophic,' said Kozloff.

"This family has been utterly devastated by the conduct of Dr. Natsis."

William Casey and LeeEllen Carroll, Casey's father and widow, expressed their relief to reporters outside the courthouse that the trial is behind them. Carroll thanked the officers who responded to the scene and testified at the trial.

"None of us will ever understand why the crash had to happen. All of our children had their father taken away from them. I continue to do everything within my sphere of influence to ensure our children have the future they would have had had their father not been stolen from them," said Carroll. JOE LOFARO/METRO

DRAFT BUDGET

Average tax bill expected to rise by about $11

Joe Lofaro
Metro | Ottawa

The Ottawa Police Services Board approved its draft budget for 2016 on Thursday, which would see the average homeowner's tax bill go up by $11 in an effort to grow the force for the first time since 2010.

Police said they will hire more officers within the $177 million operating budget, keeping in line with the 1.75 per cent tax increase. The budget is $7.2 million higher than last year.

Growing the force on a tight budget was no easy feat and police chief Charles Bordeleau is trying to hire 50 new officers over 2017 and 2018.

The Ottawa Police Service is one of the most understaffed in Canada. Among the "big 12" agencies across the country, Ottawa has one police officer per 504 residents, according to 2014 statistics. Montreal and Toronto, for example, have a police officer for every 330 and 345 residents, respectively.

Police said they found $2 million in efficiencies by cutting back in office supplies and software requirements for its IT Roadmap project, and other areas, and are projecting $820,000 in increased revenue from paid duty services.

"Part of the budget makes an investment to our people. Included in that is adding 25 new members to the Ottawa Police Service and also being responsive to workload and staffing pressures and employee wellness issues we are currently facing," Bordeleau said after the meeting.

But as the police service grows its membership next year, it is also looking at a possible staffing shortfall in its Direct Action Response Team (DART) due to a loss of provincial funding.

The number of new officers Ottawa police hope to hire in 2017 and 2018.

The province has signalled it plans to cut funding to an annual grant provided to police forces across Ontario.

In Ottawa, the funding has been used to staff five DART positions which worked on gang-related initiatives — one of the chief's top three operating priorities.

"If the funding is cut by the province then we will have to identify efficiencies or find a way to deal with that void. The guns and gangs issue is a priority for me and our police service and our community," said Bordeleau.

Residents can have their say on the police's draft budget on Nov. 30 before it is approved by city council on Dec. 9.

Trudeau, provinces, scientists talk climate

ENVIRONMENT

Seeking some common ground before Paris talks

Another piece in Justin Trudeau's pursuit of a more engaged and aggressive Canadian stance on international climate policy fell into place Thursday, but many more remain a mystery.

The prime minister announced he's invited provincial and territorial leaders to Ottawa to discuss Canada's climate change plans later this month before an international climate conference begins in Paris.

Trudeau had previously invited the provincial and territorial leaders to join him at COP21, the UN-sponsored summit that begins Nov. 30 in the French capital, where the international community hopes to complete a framework for post-2020 climate action.

Trudeau will meet the premiers Nov. 23, just before departing on an extended trip that will take him to London for an audience with the Queen, then on to Malta for a Commonwealth leaders' meeting before wrapping up with other international leaders at the Paris climate talks.

The Liberal plan has always been to present a united Canadian climate policy to the world, something that has regularly eluded prime ministers going back to Jean Chretien in the 1990s. With provinces holding many of the policy levers on environmental action, getting everyone pulling in the same direction has proved challenging.

"We are having a climate briefing by top scientists for the first ministers and for my own cabinet, to be followed by a working dinner with the premiers to exactly discuss the kind of strong and cohesive message we will be delivering as Canadians in Paris at the very important COP21 conference," Trudeau said Thursday at his second briefing of the parliamentary media in as many weeks.

Part of the COP21 process includes countries submitting intended targets for emissions cuts, something the Conservatives did last May when they committed Canada to a 30 per cent cut below 2005 levels by 2030.

However the Harper government did not provide a policy blueprint, just as it failed to put Canada on track to meet its previous 2020 target set at Copenhagen and just as the Chretien Liberals failed to produce policies that would achieve the 1997 Kyoto protocol targets.

Trudeau's new government has refused to set a target for cutting GHGs in advance of Paris, but Environment Minister Catherine McKenna did say the existing Conservative-set mark should be considered the floor.

On Thursday it was Treasury Board President Scott Brison who was left trying to thread the needle connecting resource extraction and climate action.

"We're all active as a government, and we will be considering what is the case in terms of what subsidies or approaches ..." said Brison when asked about the fossil fuel subsidy phase-out.

"But it's clear our energy sector is an important sector and developing our energy — getting it to market in a way that is environmentally and economically sustainable — is absolutely key to our government's agenda."

Thirty-eight years after his father caused an international sensation with a pirouette behind an oblivious Queen, Justin Trudeau is going to meet the monarch.

The prime minister says he's looking forward to meeting and speaking with the Queen on his way to Malta near the end of the month.

Trudeau will visit her before attending the Commonwealth heads of government meeting in Valetta Nov. 27-29 and later the United Nations climate change conference in Paris.

ing a pirouette behind the Queen in May 1977 as they took part in a G7 summit in London, England. Years after what many thought was a spontaneous event, one of Pierre Trudeau's aides revealed the gesture was planned and even rehearsed as a show of disdain for a palace protocol.

This time, the younger Trudeau is indicating that he doesn't share that attitude.

"I am absolutely delighted that Her Majesty has graciously agreed to this meeting," he said in a statement Thursday.

"As the Queen's 12th Canadian prime minister, I am honoured and very much look forward to spending this time in conversation with her."

"In her role as Queen of Canada, she has not only witnessed but also been an active participant in the evolution of our country over the past 63 years. Her Majesty will remain an integral part of our country's progress and future." THE CANADIAN PRESS

SYRIAN CRISIS

Refugees screened before, after arrival

Some security screening will be conducted on Canadian soil as the Liberals push to bring in 25,000 Syrian refugees by the end of the year, Public Safety Minister Ralph Goodale says.

Goodale told reporters that security checks on the refugees will be conducted both before and after the refugees begin arriving in Canada.

"It will be a combination of both," Goodale said after a cabinet meeting Thursday.

Security concerns were among the chief reasons the previous Conservative government advocated for moving slower on the refugee file — although Harper's former chief of defence staff, Rick Hillier, suggested those were overblown.

Goodale said his officials assured him they can get the job done, despite the ambitious timeline. Goodale's portfolio includes CSIS, which does much of the screening work, as well as the Canada Border Services Agency and the RCMP.

"My officials are satisfied that, to the extent that there are security issues, that they can be properly managed within the frame that the government is considering, and that Canada can fulfil the objective of receiving and settling 25,000 refugees in an expeditious way," Goodale said.

Goodale was speaking after cabinet got its first look at a plan hammered out by new cabinet committee to meet the end-of-year target.

EU's passport-free area under threat

EUROPE

Nations take action to slow huge influx of migrants

Passport-free travel in Europe is under threat as countries reintroduce border controls, toughen security and build fences in response to the biggest refugee emergency the continent has seen in decades.

The Schengen open-borders zone uniting 30 countries is a pinnacle of European achievement. It underpins the EU economy, allowing goods, services and people to cross frontiers without checks.

But Sweden says security at its borders cannot be assured and announced checks were resuming on Thursday, while tiny Slovenia has begun erecting a fence to stem the flow of people from Croatia, the second nation, after Hungary, to resort to such a measure.

These uncoordinated and unilateral actions in response to unpredictable movements of thousands of people have raised fresh doubts about whether the passport-free area can survive the migrant challenge.

"Saving Schengen is a race against time," EU Council President Donald Tusk warned on Thursday after a migration summit with European and African leaders in Malta.

He cited individual moves by Germany, Sweden, Slovenia and others in response to what they see as threats to their border security from the tens of thousands of migrants streaming in from Africa, the Middle East and Asia.

"Without effective control of our external borders, Schengen will not survive," Tusk said.

The two-day summit was meant to focus on how to send back to Africa those who don't qualify for asylum and discourage others from attempting the risky journey across the seas in search of a better life.

Newspaper needs 'new team'

A surviving member of Charlie Hebdo's editorial staff says the satirical newspaper devastated by this year's terror attack needs a new team, but that the publication is more important than ever.

Patrick Pelloux, a writer and doctor who was among the first to arrive at the Charlie Hebdo offices in Paris after the Jan. 7 massacre during a staff meeting, announced he was leaving in September, shortly after the last issue featuring drawings by Luz, a surviving cartoonist who also left.

In an interview Thursday with iTele, Pelloux said the newspaper, attacked by French Islamic extremists who said they were avenging its cartoons of the Prophet Muhammad, needed people to help "rediscover the meaning of caricature."

Pelloux released a book this week honouring his slain colleagues.

SOUTH KOREA

Court upholds life sentence

South Korea's top court on Thursday upheld a life sentence for the captain of a ferry that sank last year, killing more than 300 people, most of them teenagers on a school trip.

The Supreme Court upheld a lower court that sentenced Lee Joon-seok, 70, to life imprisonment for charges that included homicide, the court said in a statement. The court ruled that Lee committed homicide by "wilful negligence," concluding he fled his ship without giving an evacuation order, although, as captain, he is required by law to take measures to save his passengers.

The court also upheld prison terms of 18 months to 12 years for 14 other crew members who faced similar charges of negligence and passenger abandonment, but weren't found guilty of homicide or avoided such charges because they were subject to Lee's orders.

A total of 304 people died when the ferry Sewol sank off South Korea's southwest coast in April 2014 in one of the country's deadliest maritime disasters. Most of the victims were from a single high school.

Lee and his crew members have been the targets of fierce public anger because they were among the first people rescued from the ship when it began badly listing.

UN decries killings amid genocide fear

The UN Security Council unanimously approved a resolution Thursday condemning killings in Burundi and threatening sanctions, while international leaders urgently called for the government and opposition to meet amid fears the African nation is at risk of genocide.

Witnesses say the killings, torture and human rights violations are the result of a government crackdown on opposition members. Statements by Burundian officials last week echoed language used in the 1994 genocide in neighbouring Rwanda, where more than 800,000 ethnic Tutsis and Hutus were slaughtered in a campaign orchestrated by Rwanda's Hutu-majority extremist government.

Military reaches out to NLD as the party nears majority

Myanmar's official vote count inched closer Thursday to confirming a parliamentary majority for Nobel laureate Aung San Suu Kyi's opposition party, as the military establishment that has been her nemesis for decades appeared ready to toss in the towel.

While the army has not conceded defeat for the ruling pro-military Union Solidarity and Development Party, it has acknowledged the massive success of Suu Kyi's National League for Democracy in Sunday's election and pledged it will respect the final results. Those results seem virtually certain to allow the opposition to take over the government.

The office of army commander Senior Gen. Min Aung Hlaing said the military will hold talks with Suu Kyi after the election results are complete. Suu Kyi issued an invitation on Wednesday for a meeting with the commander, along with President Thein Sein and House Speaker Shwe Mann.

support unofficial numbers from the NLD and local media pointing to a landslide win for the pro-democracy crusader and a resounding rejection of military rule. The opposition may soon have enough confirmed seats for a parliamentary majority, it could still be another week or so until all votes are tallied.

Attention is riveted on what has been called the "magic number" for Suu Kyi's party. The election commission's latest announcement Thursday showed the NLD needs just two more seats to reach the 329 it needs for a majority in the 664-member, two-house Parliament.

Coal industry hurting

Canada's coal-export market has taken a major hit in recent years, as prices have dropped from more than $300 US a tonne in 2011 to less than $90 US a tonne this quarter because of continued oversupply and slowing demand from China. Joe Aldina, a coal analyst at Wood Mackenzie, said that while there is no quick fix for the oversupply caused by China's economic slowdown, India should start to pick up where China left off by the early 2020s.

Should hospitals allow visitors 24/7?

Three Ottawa hospitals have ditched limits on visiting hours for patients' friends and families in an effort to promote more holistic health care and reduce isolation. But is bringing familiar faces from home into the hospital really the best way to heal?

YES: TLC from family is the best medicine

Being seriously ill is scary and lonely, but having a family member or trusted friend with you — outside of the typical afternoon visiting hours — can help. And allowing that is in line with the trend toward a more family-focused, patient-centred approach to health care. Family members also know more about the patient and their history than doctors or nurses ever could. They can pitch in with tasks like feeding and personal care, and they may be able to notice when something is off. According to the Canadian Foundation for Healthcare Improvement, patients whose loved ones are allowed to stay with them in hospital experience fewer medication errors and falls, shorter stays, fewer readmissions and a generally better experience and standard of care.

NO: Patients need peace and quiet

Visiting hours enforce a period of restful calm, especially during the night, to allow patients to sleep and heal. Hospital staff already have the discretion to allow visitors to stay when circumstances warrant it. But visiting hours allow them to effectively get interlopers to leave if they're being loud or inconsiderate. Unlimited visiting will disproportionately affect people who can't afford a private or semi-private room: Even quiet talking can disturb the sleep of someone who is in pain and in an unfamiliar environment. Certain units — such as maternity, children's wards, intensive care and palliative care — already routinely allow visitors around the clock. Finally, more people coming and going might mean more infections, and could pose security issues, especially at night when fewer staff are on duty.

Stop excusing sexism: Ordain women already

Michael Coren
For Metro

It's the last acceptable face of misogyny. I speak of conservative Christianity, principally the Roman Catholic Church and hard-line evangelical Protestants, who manage to routinely discriminate against women and still enjoy a status in society that would be denied any secular organization that acted in a similar manner.

I am utterly convinced that if women had been priests, the (sexual-abuse crisis) never would have developed.

The reality is that no matter how great their ability or suitability, no woman can ever be ordained as a priest or a minister in these churches and it's time we asked some serious questions and stopped allowing sexism to hide behind religion.

The Roman Catholic argument is that Jesus was a man, and as the prime role of the priest is to represent Christ at the Mass, no woman could fulfill the position. But Jesus was also Jewish, spoke Aramaic and was born of a virgin. Try as I might I have never found an Aramaic-speaking, Jewish priest born of a virgin serving mass in Canada. Perhaps I need to look further afield!

Seriously though, if this is the best it can do the Catholic Church is on pretty shaky ground. The central word here is "represent." Every Christian believes that there is only one Jesus, but that someone can represent Him without resembling Him.

The irony is that Jesus didn't share such prejudice. He surrounded Himself with devout women, told His followers to revere His mother, and the first people to see the resurrected Christ were women — not initially believed by the frightened, faithless men they told.

Women not only played a central role in founding the church, but also in maintaining it, especially through the darkest times of ancient oppression. There were certainly women deacons and possibly female priests. But the patriarchy was at its strongest in medieval Europe and the role of Christian women was rapidly diminished.

Non-Catholic Christians who deny female ordination point to various scriptural statements concerning male leadership and female subservience, but as with so much of the Bible, context and historical understanding are vital. Today many, perhaps most Protestant churches ordain women yet there is, alas, still resistance.

Nor is just about equality. As someone who has written extensively about the Catholic sexual-abuse crisis, I am utterly convinced that if women had been priests the horror would never have developed and certainly wouldn't have been hidden.

Christianity still has so much to offer the world, but it can only do so if it abandons outdated, ugly and irrelevant conventions.

If anyone asked me what unites Canadians, I'd be stumped

Letters-to-the-editor pages in newspapers somehow still exist.

In a world suffocated by opinion (mine, yours, and both our dogs' on FB, Twitter, Insta, Reddit, article comments, YouTube comments), it seems a little quaint, no?

And yet there I was, reading the letters section of the National Post the other day. And boy, was that fun.

Charles in Nanaimo knows better than Keystone XL big-wigs that Obama always had it in for the pipeline.

Jack in Victoria suggests the end of all intersections, in favour of roundabouts, if the Liberals really want to invest in infrastructure.

Albert, also from Victoria, is wiggled out about 25,000 Syrian refugees really getting a good vetting.

Osama in Calgary has some eloquent words of loyalty and support for Canadian soldiers.

Some letter-writers sound as nutty as the emails I often get. Some people sound sane. And there's actually a diversity of opinion. There are full sentences and complete attribution, including city of residence, and no Ayn Rand-inspired handles.

It's like, I dunno, a reflection of Canadians? A cross-section of opinion I would maybe see in other papers but definitely not in my various social media feeds.

There, I follow people who interest me, and while there's a bit of political diversity, it's not much. Inflammatory (to me) opinions are at a minimum. Thus, according to the bulk of my digital newsfeeds, Canadians are pretty thrilled with Trudeau, and we'd be cool if the official opposition didn't show up.

Reading the letters felt like checking in with extended family. Still right-wingers out there, hey? Good to know.

The whole fear of immigrants and refugees, that's healthy? Okay, got it. And you went on a cruise, you say? Glad that was fun.

It reminded me of a dinner I had recently, where I got a little worked up, I'll admit, because my companion, an old family friend, really thinks Islam (and all religions) is evil.

I think I could have kept my voice down and saved the pub a few high-pitched broken wine glasses if only I'd had some reminder lately that not everyone agrees with me.

Shocking, I know.

And that people still very much and very deeply fear the "other." Still, to me, shocking.

I like getting a multi-paragraphed window into those right-wing others, and then see their full names in italics. It gives their views more weight. It makes them real.

It reminds me that if anyone asked me to describe what unites Canadians, I'd be stumped. Plus, these guys (they appear to all be men) are a hoot.

Movies that mine the news

BASED ON A TRUE STORY

Some films stick to facts, others play hard and loose

Richard Crouse
For Metro Canada

The movies have looked to the news for inspiration almost since the first time film was projected on screens.

As far back as 1899, a film called Major Wilson's Last Stand dramatized scenes from the First and Second Matabele Wars, including the death of Major Allan Wilson and his men in Rhodesia in 1893.

The trend of reel life emulating real life continues this weekend with The 33, an Antonio Banderas film based on a famous mining accident. In 2010, 33 men spent 69 days trapped underground in a copper-gold mine located near Copiapó, Chile when a rock the size of the Empire State Building blocked their exit.

"I can't think of a better story than this one to bring to the screen," says producer Mike Medavoy.

The trick is getting the story right. Director Patricia Riggins worked with the miners, Medavoy and screenwriters to create a story that, according to everyone involved, features more fact than fiction.

That isn't always the case.

In 2010, thirty-three men spent sixty-nine days trapped underground in a copper-gold mine located near Copiapó, Chile. Their story became the inspiration for the new Antonio Banderas movie, The 33. HANDOUT

According to IMDb the Jim Sturgess movie 21 calls itself a "fact based" story about a group of MIT students who used a complicated card-counting system to fleece Las Vegas casinos for millions of dollars.

The bare bones of the story are true — blackjack was played and MIT students counted cards — but Hollywood diverged from reality when casting the leads. In truth the main players were mainly Asian-Americans, including ringleader Jeff Ma who consulted on the movie.

Ma called the controversy surrounding the casting of Sturgess and Kevin Spacey

"over-blown," adding "I would have been a lot more insulted if they had chosen someone who was Japanese or Korean, just to have an Asian playing me."

The Michael Bay film Pain & Gain is listed as an action-comedy and stars Mark Wahlberg, Dwayne Johnson and Anthony Mackie certainly play up the jokes. Everyone laughed, except for Marc Schiller, the real-life inspiration for the film's kidnap victim.

"It wasn't that funny when they tried to kill me," he said. "They did run me over with a car twice after trying to blow me up in the car. The way they tell it made it look like a comedy. You also gotta remember that not only I went through this, but certain people were killed, so making these guys look like nice guys is atrocious."

Last year's Oscar winner Whiplash saw Miles Teller as a young drummer driven to extremes by a fanatical music teacher played by J.K. Simmons.

The movie draws parallels to the famous story of Jo Jones and Charlie Parker. The legend goes that Jones threw a cymbal at Parker's head after a lackluster solo, prompting the sax player to go away, practice for a year and return as one of the greatest musicians of the 20th century. Trouble is, the story isn't true. A cymbal was let loose, but according to eyewitnesses it was dropped on the floor at Parker's feet and not at his head.

"Not attempted murder," wrote Richard Brody in the New York Times, "but rather musical snark."

How does Hollywood get away playing fast and loose with the facts? Black Mass director Scott Cooper says, "I don't think people come to narrative features for the facts, or for truth. I think you go to documentaries for that. What you do come to narrative features for is psychological truth, emotion and deep humanity."

Afghanistan war in graphic detail

AFGHANISTAN MISSION

UK soldier says film accurately retells his platoon's story

Steve Gow
For Metro Canada

That's all it was but look how impactful it is."

A vivid adaptation about a small company of commandos who suddenly find themselves trying to escape a valley loaded with live land mines, Kilo Two Bravo isn't just (as Hartley describes) one of the "million stories they could have told" about the war in Afghanistan, it's the kind of nail-biting thriller that exhibits the true solidarity of soldiers.

You may have removed the Remembrance Day poppy from your lapel for another year but that doesn't mean you can't still honour the sacrifice of our war veterans.

"Whether you're Canadian or British, society doesn't pay enough attention," said former UK army medic Paul 'Tug' Hartley, whose life-saving actions are the basis of the acclaimed new film Kilo Two Bravo. "You see on the news a British soldier got killed (and then) they carry on. This film will give people insight into five hours of someone's life.

"I remember saying I'm happy to sign up for this so long as you tell our story," recalled Hartley, who originally feared filmmakers would exploit the harrowing tale. "It's not a war movie. It's a movie about adversity and heroism. This could've happened in a car crash; it's just about a bunch of people who come together and do what they did."

But for the actor who recreates Hartley's acts of medical heroism on-screen, the real life situation is not to be understated. In fact, even just pretending to be there was a stressful experience.

"The whole shoot was very intense — six days a week, 15 hours a day in 55-degree heat. All of those conditions affect you psychologically," admitted Game of Thrones star Mark Stanley of the chronologically-shot drama. "Was there time to decompress? I don't think so. I think we probably just drank too much on our days off."

Hartley doesn't diminish the actors' difficult job either. Having seen the film several times now, he insists that moviegoers are certainly in for an authentic experience.

"It's 99 per cent accurate," said Hartley. "The only way you were going to get that extra one per cent is if you had been there and bled with us."

It's a movie about adversity and heroism.

McDormand won an Academy Award for her performance in Fargo (1996). She and Coen met when she auditioned for Blood Simple in 1983 and married the next year. At the Rome Film Festival in October, reporters asked McDormand for the secret to a lasting relationship. "I think it's having different stories to tell each other," she said.

A tribute to soul legend Mavis Staples

MUSIC ON FILM

Jeff Tweedy, Bonnie Raitt feature in doc about Staples

Steve Gow
For Metro Canada

Many people feel inspired after seeing their favorite musician in concert but very few are motivated enough to make a movie. However that's exactly what septuagenarian soul singer Mavis Staples did to Jessica Edwards.

"It sort of sounds a little bit hokey but it's true, I wanted to make the movie because of the way that Mavis made me feel," explained the filmmaker about her debut documentary, Mavis!

The documentary Mavis! is now playing in select theatres and is available on iTunes. COURTESY MARK POKEMPNER/FILM FIRST CO

MAVIS STAPLES' HITS FOR OTHERS

At least three classic Staple Singers songs are often associated with other artists:

• The Last Time — The Rolling Stones

The Staple Singers scored a hit with this traditional gospel song in 1955 but the ditty truly found success with a rock adaptation by The Stones a decade later.

• The Weight — The Band
In 1968, Robbie Robertson-led roots-rock act The Band had a big hit singing "take a load off Annie" but The Staple Singers also highlighted the hymn on their first album for Stax Records the same year.

• Respect Yourself — Bruce Willis
While The Staple Singers had a big hit with this catchy single in '72, Bruce Willis made it his signature song when he took a stab at a music career while still slugging it out on TV's Moonlighting in the '80s.

"I never experienced anything like that in my life and I wanted to feel that way again (and) I wanted other people to feel the way that I felt when I was listening to her."

Mavis Staples has certainly been electrifying audiences and deserving of a documentary ever since her and family band, The Staple Singers were crooning soul classics like Respect Yourself in the early '70s. Still performing at 76 years old, the entertainer and outspoken civil rights activist is even earning new fans thanks to collaborations with the likes of Wilco's Jeff Tweedy.

Indeed, her music has influenced a lot of artists. Although Edwards began the biography as a self-financed indie project, she soon discovered many celebrities wanted to speak about Staples. So Edwards took a less-is-more approach, favouring tributes from musicians with close personal connections — like Tweedy or Bonnie Raitt. "It could have ended up being a hundred people (in the film)," explained Edwards.

"But I've never been a fan of the talking head interview that comes on and doesn't have a lot to contribute (so) I tried hard not to just go off the handle and get Beyoncé and Jennifer Hudson or anybody I could get my hands on just because it made a good name." Still, one superstar that Edwards did attempt to land was Prince (who worked on two of Staples's albums). While The Purple One turned down the invitation, Edwards insists he remained "very supportive" of the film. "I don't think Prince has done an on-camera interview in decades," laughed Edwards. "(So) I had a big hunch an interview was going to be hard to get."

Man at work: Hawksley drops new EP

OLD CHEETAH

Signature sound abound on latest album by Workman

Canada's notoriously unpredictable rocker has plans to settle down, for a time, and 'sing quiet, little songs.'

"I still feel like a reckless idiot," proclaims Hawksley Workman. "But a reckless idiot who's getting tired of certain aspects of the baggage that comes along with being a reckless idiot."

Reckless? Definitely. "Idiot" might be pushing it, though, for as creatively cavalier as Workman has played with his fascinating, if occasionally self-sabotaging, 15-album career, there's never been much idiocy to his output. At the end of the day, he's more "mad genius" than "idiot."

Not so mad that he can't still command a 1,000-ish-capacity venue when he plays a hometown gig in Toronto, as he will do this Saturday.

Workman might be pathologically inclined to confuse his audience, but he's definitely cultivated a core fan base that thrives upon the element of surprise.

He's been contemplating this very subject lately, he says. Which is why, even as he tours the country in support of his unhinged glam-rock romp, Old Cheetah, he's thinking of maybe throwing the fans a bone.

"I'm gonna sit at the piano in January, very early in the mornings, and I'm going to sing quiet, little songs," says Workman, evoking Neil Young — specifically, Young's patience-testing Le Noise gig at Massey Hall in 2011 — as a model of unpredictability he's uncertain about following.

"It was terrible. I've not talked about a concert in recent memory more than that one because of his willingness to be an old man disappointing a roomful of people. Is that the strength of his artistry? Is that him being super 'in touch'? Is he out of touch? Is he playing games with us?

"In a way, I know what I do well and I write songs well, and I've maybe been avoiding it a bit in favour of doing wild, textural record-making. I think it's almost like I have to fulfil a contract with myself and the people who are sticking with me through this 15-record journey and go: 'Look, look, I know I owe us all a simple record with some simple songs and some clever lyrics.'

If Workman's "wild" side is more your bag than his more introspective and singer-songwriterly one, not to worry. A second album with the alt-Can-Con "supergroup" Mounties will commence by the end of the month, and he's already needing his Christian Barry, his co-creator in the rock opera The God That Comes, to do another theatrical piece. He's also readying an illustrated (not by him) children's book based on one of the songs from his 2001 Christmas album, Almost a Full Moon, for next year's holiday season.

"The Canadian music business is chugging along on its own set of train tracks and we don't really cross all that much anymore," he says.

"They're busy chasing the things that they chase and they play a different game than what I play. And it's sort of a relief."

Warm socks, warm hearts

As anyone who's ever experienced a Canadian winter can attest, having cold feet really, really sucks in a way that only having cold feet can suck.

With that in mind, Hawksley Workman is asking fans to bring donations of warm socks — preferably pairs, of course — to dates on his current Winter Bird tour.

As HawksleyWorkman.com notes, "socks are typically one of the most needed items on shelters' lists."

"We know it's not saving the planet, but it seemed like a human gesture that was kind and connected," Workman says.

Bless his cotton socks.

Time to wind down the sentimentality

CASSETTE TAPES

Why a format that should be long-dead is still keeping it reel

Alan Cross
For Metro Canada

We need to have a conversation about the cassette. While it served us well — in the '80s, propelled by the boombox, the Walkman and car audio, the cassette was briefly the best-selling format for pre-recorded music — its time is over.

Eclipsed by CDs, CD burners and then digital music files, there's no reason why cassettes should still exist.

Yet there's a vocal group of music fans clamouring for a vinyl-like resurrection.

September had Cassette Store Day. There are dozens of cassette-only labels. Bloggers romanticize (fetishize?) the old-school cassette mixtape.

Clearly these people weren't around during the original days of the cassette: Mixtapes had to be recorded in real time; the tapes jammed; pre-recorded albums sounded awful and they melted on the dashboard or ended up under the seats of the car.

So why are cassettes still here?

1 Luddite hipsters: The inconvenience of cassettes trumps that of enjoying music on vinyl, demonsting an even greater love for music. Or so they'd have us believe.

2 Curiosity: Blink-182 just announced that four of their biggest albums will be re-released on cassette.

These are just tchotchkes; wannabe collector's items.

3 Emerging markets: Cassettes do have their rugged side. They stand up well to the heat and dust of places like Africa and India. Just don't let them sit in direct sunlight.

4 Japan: Yes, it's the land of the electronic gadget, but walk into any small store and you'll find packages of cassettes for sale.

Huge swaths of Japanese culture are very conservative and continue to hang on to the old ways. Hey, fax machines are still a thing over there.

5 Prison Releases: Enough people are incarcerated in the U.S. — more than 2.2 million as of 2013 — for convicts to be a viable standalone music market.

CDs are forbidden in jails because they can be turned into shanks. MP3 players are allowed but without Internet access, they're useless. Vinyl? Hardly.

The only remaining option is the lowly cassette.

But you can't just use any type of cassette tape in prison. Companies like Fortress Audio and Duplication.ca offer blank cassettes made with clear shells (to prevent smuggling) and without any screws (they can be weaponized) specifically for prison use.

There are also services like Music 4 Inmates that specialize in providing music for the incarcerated — on cassette, of course.

While most of us have moved on, the cassette will still be here for a while to come.

Deep into Guatemala's emerald forest

TIKAL

Hike reveals ancient sites and curious creatures

Aurélie Resch

For Metro Canada

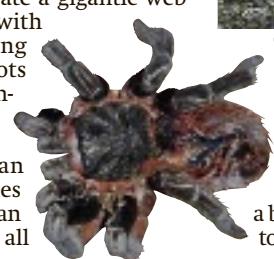

It all starts with a warning sign at the entrance. Located near a pond, it warns of the presence of crocodiles and tells visitors to keep away from the water. You are also advised that snakes, insects and animals hide in the forest and that it is preferable to stay on the path.

My Guatemalan guide picks a spider out of a hole on the ground, gently placing it in my hand. "She is not hungry. You're OK," he tells me as I look at the fat, fuzzy tarantula sitting in my palm. I totally forget about the "OK" part as soon as the tarantula starts to walk her way along my arm.

I squirm and throw the poor thing onto a fellow journalist's shoulder. She starts to scream. Strange encounters abound in the archeological site of Tikal, Guatemala, enough to fill anyone's lust for adventure.

Visiting Tikal is like entering a lost world enveloped by a lush emerald forest. The trees and bushes create a gigantic web of green, with intertwining leaves, roots and branches. It is estimated the Guatemalan jungle hides 4,000 Mayan structures, all dating back to the eighth century.

The humidity (it's 35 C) makes the uphill hike a bit of a challenge. Walking toward the pre-Columbian pyramids the quiet solitude is broken by some sudden loud shrieks.

The howler monkeys sitting at the top of the trees, and swinging from one branch to another, are just greeting us as we enter the site. (We actually feel lucky since they aren't throwing their excrement at us, something they have been known to do). A bit further down we run into a dozen coatis — Central American raccoons — playing near the path.

In Tikal, I marvel at the acoustics of the Plaza of the Seven Temples, clapping my hands and listening to it echo off the walls of the structures. I am in awe at the two main sets of pyramids: the Lost World and the Great Plaza.

The former is the most ancient group of pyramids on the site and features 30 temples and pyramids built along astronomical alignments to solstices, equinoxes and certain important stars.

GETTING THERE

The National Park of Tikal is located in northern Guatemala in the Petén province. There are two airlines flying to Isla de Flores. At its Mundo Maya airport, you can contact a tour operator that can offer you transportation with a guide.

After climbing up one of the pyramids — some of them are 60 metres high — I take some time to enjoy the stunning view. The tops of temples emerge from the emerald jungle, birds fly out of the ceiba trees, and other visitors to the site look like ants scurrying around the base of the pyramid far below.

It's easy to feel like you have been transported back to the days of the Mayans.

AIRBNB PROPERTIES WHERE THE FORCE RUNS STRONG

From an off-grid earthship carved into the desert of New Mexico to earth domes in California reminiscent of the planet Tatooine, Airbnb has collected Star Wars-inspired properties across its network that are located in a galaxy that's actually not so far away. AFP

1 Joshua Tree, California

Perhaps the most similar in likeness to Luke Skywalker's home planet Tatooine and the Lars homestead, the terracotta-coloured Sleep Pod Earth Domes are set in the California desert and can sleep families of up to four. Dome walls are built using Earthbag technology that keep buildings cool in the summer and warm in winter.

2 Taos, New Mexico

For Star Wars fans who are also lovers of the earth, the Brand New Studio Earthship is a secluded, self-powered retreat in the New Mexico desert. The property is completely off-grid, catching its own rainwater and generating its own electricity thanks to solar panels. Moreover, thanks to being carved out of the New Mexico desert, the property also recalls Skywalker's home planet.

3 Khao Yai, Thailand

An aerial view of the Modern Green Circular Dome suggests a more illustrious past for the resort, as though it crash-landed in the middle of a Thai jungle forest and stayed. Like spokes on a wheel, individual, spherical pods jut out from a circular walkway and are covered with jungle overgrowth. Pods are clean and bright, furnished with beds, full bathrooms, TVs, communal dining room and pool.

Where art, fashion collide in Miami

DESIGN DISTRICT

Eclectic murals and sculptures mingle with luxury shops

It was once was a pineapple farm. Then a rough, industrial neighbourhood overlooking a furniture district. Today, the Miami Design District is emerging as an upscale shopping and art mecca.

The neighbourhood is located just a few miles from downtown and South Beach. Its attractions include contemporary art installations, a parking garage that's an architectural head-turner, and storefront luxury shops from Hermes to Tom Ford, with a concentration of jewelry and timepiece brands.

"We're able to provide them with spaces that allow the brands to present the full range of their creative expression, from the architecture and design of their stores to the scope of their merchandise offering," said Craig Robins, a native Miami developer and CEO of the real estate company Dacra who is also credited with helping with the transformation of South Beach.

The Design District also becomes a major hub during Art Basel Miami in early December, when art takes over the city.

By the end of 2016, the 18-square-block neighbourhood will include more than 200 retailers from Christian Dior and Rag & Bone to Van Cleef & Arpels, art galleries, design showrooms and restaurants, as well as a boutique hotel and luxury residential condos and lofts.

On a second-floor terrace is "Netscape," a 24-seat web of

A mixed-use retail building inspired by waterfalls and rain squalls by Japanese architect Sou Fujimoto will be completed by 2016. The two-story building will feature glass fins extending from the rooftop down to the open courtyard.

A couple of blocks away is Miami's Institute of Contempor-

Garages as art

Next to busy Interstate 95 is the City View Garage (enter on NE 38th Street between NE First Avenue and North Miami Avenue), its wavy gold- and titanium-coated steel panels shimmering against the Miami sun. On the north and south sides are murals by artist John Baldessari including a cinematic image of swimmers, beach ball and all.

Another garage (not yet completed) will be a seven-storey mixed-use building with six different facades: a wall of recycled car tops; another of reflective traffic barriers repurposed as dynamic screens interspersed with flower boxes; a theatrical composition of graphic cartoon characters mixed with ornate baroque details; a corner panel of interlocking volumes that evoke puzzle pieces; a series of cut-outs dubbed "the ant farm" which exposes what is going on inside; and a painted mural of a candle being burned at both ends.

Craving cheese? Try going Dutch

BOOKING.COM

Guide offers alternatives to typical foodie destinations

A new guide for food lovers has revealed travellers' favourite destinations for beer, cheese, dim sum and chocolate, with a few unexpected results.

Using the 65 million guest reviews shared on their Destination Finder portal, online reservation site Booking.com compiled a Foodie's Guide to the Globe, determined by the strength of traveller endorsements.

And while the list includes predictable destinations such as Tokyo for sushi and Brussels for waffles, it also includes a few ideas that may inspire food lovers to try something new.

Here are a few standouts from the list of 15 foodie hotspots:

GOUDA, NETHERLANDS

Cheese

Evoke all things cheese and the knee-jerk reaction may be to think of France. But in fact, travellers highly recommend the city of Gouda, located in the southern Netherlands, where the cheese has been sold and traded for hundreds of years.

INCHEON, SOUTH KOREA

Chinese street food — outside China

As a major trading port with China, the city of Incheon, located outside Seoul and home to the South Korean international airport, is also home to the country's only official Chinatown.

NUWARA ELIYA, SRI LANKA

High tea

It's not just for the Brits. In Nuwara Eliya, an area referred to as "Little England" for its tea plantations, visitors can sip on Ceylon tea and munch on cakes and sandwiches while soaking in the stunning misty mountainscape.

LODI, U.S.

Wine

While Napa Valley may monopolize the title of wine country in the U.S., there's another wine destination in Northern California that's gaining attention in the wine world, Lodi. Just this week, Wine Enthusiast magazine named it the wine region of the year.

GRIMSBY, ENGLAND

Fish and chips

For the best, most authentic fish and chips, travellers recommend the seaside town of Grimsby on the northeast coast of England.

Orangeville, Ont., B.C. cities top planners' annual awards

Loren Christie
For Metro Canada

For the last five years, the Canadian Institute of Planners has hosted an annual contest called Great Places in Canada. The goal is to engage Canadians in sharing the places they love while highlighting the important work that is being done in building and rehabilitating our cities, towns and parks.

From great metropolises to tiny towns the 29 nominees provide a catalogue of travel destinations that are local treasures. The winners in the categories of Great Street, Great Neighbourhood and Great Public Space were revealed this past week.

Broadway in Orangeville, Ont., won the title of Great Street. "To be great, a street must be a destination in its own right. Broadway fits the bill as an inviting place at the heart of Orangeville," says Ben Petch, contest juror.

Other highlights are the institutional uses that anchor the street and give it purpose and a variety of restaurants, landscaping and patios, which enable people to enjoy the space. The historical buildings add character, and regular festivals and events ensure people experience the street.

Great Neighbourhood went to Vancouver's West End. The West End is easy, safe and inviting; residents walk and bike to work and can easily explore Vancouver's beaches, trails and the incredible Stanley Park.

"Transit access, traffic calming, street furniture, treed promenades, pocket parks and public spaces reflect a thoughtful approach to placemaking," says juror Jaspal Marwah. "Home to the city's LGBTQ community, the West End's density is evenly matched by its diversity of residents, and by a strong commitment to creating an inclusive community that prioritizes affordable housing."

Stuart Park in Kelowna, B.C., was awarded Great Public Space. According to juror Kevin King, "Stuart Park bridges the re-emergence of Kelowna's downtown within the incredible natural setting of the Okanagan Valley. Energized by a civic plaza, the park comes alive at all seasons. Summer performances on the plaza are memorable, while free winter-time ice-skating under the clear Okanagan skies invites people in the winter months."

Recent enhancements to Stuart Park have made it a year-round destination. Its unique reflection of local character and natural environment and accessibility for multi-generational activities make it a great destination for travellers to the area.

Runners-up for Great Street, Great Neighbourhood and Great Public Space were Main Street in Wolfville, N.S., Quartier Petit Champlain in Quebec City, Que., and Lethbridge River Valley in Lethbridge, Alta.

Back in the saddle thanks to War Amps

Being born a right arm amputee hasn't stopped 11-year-old Olivia of Merrickville from living a full and active life.

Olivia has a passion for horseback riding. Thanks to support from The War Amps Child Amputee (CHAMP) Program, she received a device that allows her to hold on to the reins.

Olivia's mom, Stachia, says the new device has made a difference for her daughter. "It allows her to have better control of the horse and helps in keeping her balance. CHAMP makes it possible for Olivia to do whatever she sets her mind to."

The War Amps encourages Champs to develop a positive attitude towards their amputation and live to their full potential.

With the public's support of the Key Tag and Address Label Service, young amputees like Olivia obtain the tools they need to enjoy their favourite activities.

Fine-tune your holiday decor

Andrea Janus

The holidays are almost upon us, and it's about that time to drag the decorations out of the attic and start making the house look a little more festive.

But to avoid going full-on Clark Griswold with lights that will strain the local power station and more kitschy bric-a-brac than a dollar store, consider these tips from interior designer William MacDonald of WillMac Design.

First things first. "Don't go overboard," he says. "If you think you have too much, you do."

Many people make the mistake of overloading one room: piling up the sideboard, mantelpiece and end tables with decorations.

"Spread the love around the house," MacDonald advises. Even if you're decorating from the same box of ornaments you've had for decades, spread those tchotchches kes around the house, including the powder room or the front hall.

The best way to avoid going overboard, though, is to pick a theme, which could be a motif (snowflakes or reindeer) or a colour, then build your decor around that.

Look for inspiration anywhere, even months before Christmas on your summer holiday.

MacDonald found a starfish on the East Coast one year, and the following Christmas the star was his holiday motif. Once you decide on a theme, it isn't necessary to spend a lot of money, MacDonald says.

A local park or wooded area, and even the grocery store, are great places to start.

Filling large decorative bowls, or even large serving bowls or soup terrines, with seasonal fruits (pomegranates or clementines, for example), nuts, or pine cones and branches that you've sprayed with silver or gold paint is an easy way to get a cozy seasonal look without breaking the bank.

"I'm a strong believer in going to your fridge first," MacDonald says.

Otherwise, invest in a good

quality artificial garland to keep in your holiday kit that you can use year after year. Drape it over the mantel, along a staircase or down the middle of your holiday table.

Every year you can accessorize it differently based on your chosen theme, MacDonald says.

Party Prep

Once the house is decorated and you're ready to entertain, MacDonald advises bringing in some key items that you will likely reuse throughout the year.

A bar cart will always come in handy during the holidays for smaller parties, and makes for easy entertaining year-round.

But for a larger guest list, use a sideboard or rent a large table and set out all the fixings, MacDonald recommends.

And always be prepared for surprise visitors by having a low-sided basket full of nuts, candies and cocktail napkins underneath or inside the coffee table.

When friends pop by unexpectedly for a holiday libation, "You just bring that up and put it on the coffee table and say, 'let me get you a glass of wine,'" MacDonald says.

CFL AWARDS

Redblacks tandem in line for honours

There was a double nod to the Ottawa Redblacks as coach Rick Campbell and quarterback Henry Burris were named shortlisted for the CFL's end-of-year awards.

Campbell and Chris Jones of the Edmonton Eskimos are the finalists for the CFL's coach of the year award. Jones led the Eskimos to a 14-4 record — tied with Calgary for the best in the CFL — to finish atop the West Division after beating the Stampeders in two of three regular-season meetings. Ottawa (12-6) finished first in the East in its second year under Campbell after posting just two victories in its inaugural CFL campaign.

This year's top coach format is a change for the league.

Traditionally three finalists were named and the winner was honoured well after the Grey Cup game. Now the top coach will be unveiled with the other awards during Grey Cup week. The CFL has also secured a partnership with AGF, a Canadian-based investment management firm, to sponsor the coach-of-the-year award.

Burris and Bo Levi Mitchell are the finalists for the CFL's outstanding player award.

Levi Mitchell, the MVP of last year's Grey Cup game, was second overall in passing (4,551) as Calgary (14-4) finished second in the West Division standings.

The other nominees include: linebackers Adam Bighill of the B.C. Lions and Simoni Lawrence of the Hamilton Tiger-Cats (defensive player); Winnipeg Blue Bombers defensive lineman Jamaal Westerman and Ottawa Redblacks receiver Brad Sinopoli (Canadian); B.C.'s Jo-

Letourneau hopes trouble is brewing

UFC

Quebecer eyes big chance amid Rousey-mania Down Under

After carving open Jessica Penne's face in June, UFC strawweight champion Joanna Jedrzejczyk climbed the Octagon fence, looked at the camera and asked "Who's next?"

Canadian Valerie (Trouble) Letourneau answered the call.

On Saturday, the 115-pounder from Montreal enters the cage a 20-1 underdog against the hard-hitting Polish title-holder in the co-main event of UFC 193 in Melbourne, Australia.

(Rowdy) Ronda Rousey defends her bantamweight (135-pound) crown against former champion boxer Holly Holm in the Etihad Stadium main event. The pay-per-view show could set an attendance record for the UFC, surpassing the 55,724 who took in UFC 129 in April 2011 at Toronto's Rogers Centre.

Rousey (12-0) is also a 20-1 favourite to dispatch Holm (9-0), who is ranked seventh among bantamweight contenders. It's the sixth title defence for Rousey, a former Olympic judo bronze medallist who has become the face of the UFC.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Letourneau (8-3) is unfazed by her heavy underdog status.

"Most of the people won't even know who I am and (also) haven't seen my fights," she said. "I always feel like the public doesn't see fights like the fighters look at it."

"I'm not so surprised but I feel like I have the respect of Joanna. She knows what I'm capable of."

While Letourneau may not be a household name, she has been fighting professionally since 2007 and was a trailblazer among Quebec female fighters. She is ranked eighth among strawweights after winning all three of her previous UFC bouts.

"Finally the hard work paid off," she said after getting the title bid.

Some might say be careful what you wish for when it comes to fighting Jedrzejczyk, a former Muay Thai champion with world-class striking. After less than three rounds with the champion, a bloody Penne looked like someone had taken a box-cutter to her face.

Jedrzejczyk (10-0) registered 126 significant strikes to Penne's 25. When she dethroned inaugural champion Carla Esparza at UFC 185 in March, she held a 53-4 edge.

The predatory Polish fighter also stuffed 27 of 28 takedown attempts in those two fights.

Still the 32-year-old Letourneau says her preparations have been ideal and that she feels no more pressure than any other fight.

Letourneau is coming off an upset decision win over Maryna (Iron Lady) Moroz in August in Saskatoon. She floored the Ukrainian fighter in the first round, was wobbled in the second but survived and took the fight to the ground in the third in a gritty performance.

The Canadian was unranked while the previously unbeaten Moroz was ranked eighth going into the fight. Injuries have interrupted Letourneau's career in the past.

After a December 2007 loss to fellow Canadian Alexis Davis, she fought just once in 40 months due to a broken hand, concussion and two shoulder surgeries.

Still Letourneau has won seven of her last eight — she was beaten by Claudia Gadelha in 2012 — after losing two of her first three pro fights (against Davis and fellow Canadian Sarah Kaufman).

Letourneau and daughter Gabrielle headed south two years ago to train at American Top Team in Florida. She had spent 10 years training at Montreal's Tristar Gym, eventually leaving because she was the only female pro fighter there and thought she needed new surroundings.

The Australian stadium show originally was to have featured welterweight champion (Ruthless) Robbie Lawler and Carlos (The Natural Born Killer) Condit. The UFC shifted Rousey-Holm to the main event when Lawler was injured. The Melbourne card actually takes place Sunday in Australia but will air live Saturday night in North America. Josh Donaldson's super season for the Toronto Blue Jays has landed him a Silver Slugger award, Major League Baseball has announced. One award was announced Thursday for the best offensive performer at each position in each of the two leagues.

WADA DOPING REPORT

Russia rules out Olympic boycott

With an Olympic boycott ruled out, Russia is planning to at least partially admit it has a doping problem.

Russian Sports Minister Vitaly Mutko told The Associated Press on Thursday that there will "not in any case" be a boycott of next year's Olympics in Rio de Janeiro.

A short time later in a separate interview, the acting president of the Russian track federation told the AP he is ready to own up to some of the charges levelled in the World Anti-Doping Agency commission's massive report on doping in the country.

"We admit some things, we argue with some things, some are already fixed, it's a variety," said Vadim Zelichenok, declining to provide further details. "It's not for the press."

The governing body of track and field is expected to rule Friday on whether to suspend Russia from competition because of the doping scandal. If Russia is banned, the country's track and field team could be excluded from next year's Olympics.

Monday's damning report by the WADA commission recommended that the Russian track federation be suspended, saying its athletes and officials were involved in "extensive" use of performance-enhancing drugs, obstructed doping tests and helped to cover up drug use. The report said Zelichenok "refused to co-operate" with investigators.

Even if Russia's track and field team is banned, Mutko told the AP that the country has no intention of boycotting the Olympics.

"Russia is against a boycott. Russia is against political interference in sport," Mutko said. "Understand that Russia is a dependable partner of the international Olympic movement." Mutko also appealed for Russia's track team to be allowed to compete, arguing that a blanket ban would unfairly punish clean athletes. THE CANADIAN PRESS

CFL

East champs prepare for final against Cats or Argos

Pouring rain doesn't make for an ideal practice setting, but the Ottawa Redblacks had no complaints Thursday.

With a bye ahead of next weekend's East Final, the Redblacks are making the most of their extra practice time and say dealing with inclement weather is just part of the preparation process.

"This was a good day today because it was raining," said head coach Rick Campbell, the East nominee for the CFL coach of the year award.

"We were in pads and guys could have just gone through the motions, but there was a good energy and I think guys are looking forward to the game. It's still a ways away, but I was very impressed with the whole group."

The Redblacks will play the winner of Sunday's division semifinal between the Hamilton Tiger Cats and Toronto Argonauts.

"I feel the key for us right now is being mindful of what's going on around us and being more in our playbook and just studying and being prepared for any team that's coming," said receiver Ernest Jackson. "You just want to be ready when a play is called to be able to execute it without any issues."

The Redblacks swept both of their games against Hamilton this season but lost all three meetings to the Argonauts.

Ottawa quarterback Henry Burris, the East nominee for the most outstanding player award, believes those losses to Toronto were key to the Redblacks' success.

"I said those games would make us better in the end," he said. "I truly believe that. When you're a team that's fought so hard to get to the top and all of a sudden you're in a game that's for first place you don't know how to respond to that. You get lost in the emotions of the game."

"I think the (three) times we played Toronto we lost perspective on who we are as a team. You need to just be who you are ... those (three) games taught us how to go out and respond in adverse situations."

The Redblacks had a few days off earlier in the week before returning to the field at TD Place, where they have kept practices fairly short. Players have enjoyed the week and been responsive to the workload.

"This is money time," said Campbell.

"This is where you want to take advantage of these situations and our guys have done a very good job of going to work every week and doing their thing. That's what we need to do is focus on the East Final and hopefully more good things will happen."

A number of players have been through this scenario before and say it's important to use the extra time to their advantage.

"Complacency is the biggest thing and I don't see that on this team," added Burris. "I've played with other teams where we were already talking about we're going to the Cup and I don't hear anybody talking about that on this team. We're just looking forward to playing again."

"Whoever our next opponent is we can't wait to see who that is, but we're making sure to use these practices to stay sharp, to stay focused and to come out with some ideas for next week and everybody's into it." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada to get another shot at Honduras

More than three years on, the stench still lingers.

The Canadian men's soccer team travelled to Honduras in October 2012 needing only a draw to make the final round of qualifying for the World Cup in Brazil, but instead suffered an embarrassing 8-1 beating that crushed their hopes of making the tournament for the first time since the country's only appearance in 1986.

"It's something that I know a lot of us have been thinking about," midfielder Atiba Hutchinson said this week. "It hurt us a lot."

Canada has an opportunity to avenge that defeat when it opens the penultimate CONCACAF qualifying round for the 2018 World Cup against Honduras on Friday.

Among the 12 countries left in the qualifying region that covers North and Central America and the Caribbean, Canada is ranked 102nd by FIFA and is in one of three four-team groups with No. 24 Mexico, No. 94 El Salvador and No. 95 Honduras. The two best in each round-robin pool advance to the final round. The top three get places at the World Cup, while the fourth must face an Asian country in a two-game playoff. THE CANADIAN PRESS

WORLD CUP OF HOCKEY

Canadians tasked with building up Team Europe

Winnipeg Jets coach
Paul Maurice
GETTY IMAGES

Some top Canadians will be tasked with trying to beat Canada at the World Cup of Hockey.

In addition to head coach Ralph Krueger, Team Europe has named Paul Maurice to its coaching staff and Sean Burke and Lorne Henning to its scouting staff for the 2016 tournament.

"I'd love to beat Canada because in this tournament they're going to be the favourite and we want to win the tournament," Burke said. "So that would be incredibly exciting to be able to beat Canada."

Along with Burke and Henning, the scouting staff includes American Ricky Olczyk, Slovak Peter Bondra and Czech Vaclav Nedomansky. That group, serving under German president Franz Reindl and Slovak general manager Miroslav Satan, is charged with putting together the tournament's most diverse team.

Krueger is from Winnipeg, where Maurice is currently coaching the Jets. Maurice is a Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., native who was an assistant coach for Canada at the 2014 world championships.

"We don't have any country that will be super strong on this team," Satan said. "We'll go by quality, not nationality. That will be our motto for this."

That's certainly the case for the management, scouting and coaching staffs. Krueger, with his wealth of experience coaching overseas, is the head guy behind the bench after helping out Mike Babcock at the Sochi Olympics.

Burke, who's not working in the NHL this season after previously serving as the Arizona Coyotes' goaltending coach, was part of Hockey Canada's gold-medal-winning management group at the world championships and is embracing this new challenge of going against his native country.

"My mother's European, she was born in Germany," Burke said with a laugh. "I don't look at this as anything other than a great opportunity to participate in a tournament that will be remembered for years and years. It's the best players, it's the best management groups, the best coaching groups."

Avocado Egg Salad Sandwich

Ceri Marsh & Laura Keogh
For Metro Canada

The addition of avocado is a creamy and nutritious twist on your usual egg salad.

Ready in

Prep time: 10 minutes
Cook time: 15 minutes

Makes: 2 or 3 sandwiches, depending how big you like your sandwiches.

Ingredients

- 3 hard boiled eggs
- 2 avocados, pitted
- 1 Tbsp Greek yogurt
- 1 tsp lemon juice
- 2 Tbsp chives, chopped fine
- 1/4 tsp Dijon mustard
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 4 to 6 slices whole grain bread

Directions

1. Egg boiling trick: place eggs in cold water and put pot over medium high heat. Bring the water to a boil, place a lid on pot, take off the heat and set your timer to 12 minutes.
2. Rinse the eggs under cold water to cool them down enough to peel. Remove the shells. Roughly chop the boiled eggs.
3. In a large bowl, mash your ripe avocados, breaking them down into chunks. Add the chopped eggs, lemon juice, chives, Dijon and give it all a good mix. Salt and pepper to taste.
4. Spread your mixture on sandwich bread and add anything else you like — tomatoes, lettuce, sliced cucumber.

*IT'S ALL IN THE STARS by Sally Brompton

Aries March 21 - April 20
You are hugely ambitious and you don't mind when the pressure is on — in fact you thrive on it. What happens next will give you the opportunity to prove yourself. Be amazing.

Taurus April 21 - May 21
No matter how many times you've failed in the past you'll make up for it simply because you believe in yourself and refuse to give up. Your staying power is legendary and guarantees success.

Gemini May 22 - June 21
You have been too cautious of late but as from today you will go to the other extreme and take risks left, right and centre. Whether or not you are right to do so remains to be seen.

Cancer June 22 - July 23
You have been generous lately, both with your time and money, but now you have to put your own needs first. The planets warn that you must not give to others what you need for yourself.

Leo July 24 - Aug. 23
If you have fallen behind in your workload you must make an effort to catch up or revise your schedule so that you are not under so much pressure. Are the deadlines necessary?

Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
If your efforts are yielding ever smaller results it is a sure sign you have pushed yourself too hard and need to slow down. Strike a balance between your work and your wellbeing.

Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Your self-belief may have taken a hammering but soon you will be back to your best. However, don't start believing that nothing can go wrong. Over-confidence could lead to disaster.

Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You are more sensitive than people imagine and what happens today will affect you deeply. Put on a brave face and make it appear as if you are in full control but open up to someone you trust as well.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You may not have been your usual sunny self but today's link between Mercury, planet of the mind, and Jupiter, your ruler, will inspire you.

Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Spend less time thinking about what might go wrong and more time enjoying what's going right. Something will happen to make sure you realize just how lucky you are.

Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You have put up with a lot recently and although there were times you almost gave up you kept on battling. Soon you will get your reward.

Pisces Feb. 20 - March 20
You will come to the aid of someone in need today and it will do you both a lot of good. Selfless actions always come back to the person who makes them and some day someone will help you when you most need assistance.
